Chef clothing –History

Chefs' clothing remains a customary in the food industry. The tradition of wearing this type of standard clothing dates back to the mid-19th century. Marie-Antoine Careme, a popular French chef, is credited with developing the current chef's uniform. The toques were already used, but he sought a uniform to honour the chef. Chef's coat was chosen to be white to signify cleanliness. Chefs wear cooking aprons for several reasons. Typically one reason is that they are dealing with a variety of food ingredients for many hours each day and have to have a means of keeping their clothing free from dirt, stains and odors.

Chef Uniform

The conventional chef's uniform (or chef's whites) includes

- a) A toque (traditional hat),
- b) White Chef coat,
- c) White double-breasted jacket,
- d) Checkered pants/Black pants
- e) Chef
- f) Chef Shoes

Certainly, the image of a chef, in a pristine white jacket and toque, is recognized the world over as a professional, the predecessors to be thanked for this. The western world incorporates checkered pants and white coats as a common uniform for chefs.

This clothing that is worn by chefs throughout the world is very idiosyncratic. The chef distinctively wear a coat to stand out from the crowd . The color of the coat is pristine white. These embellishments can be designed as thrown off buttons going down the front of the coat, French cuffs that can be plain or have a black or colorful piping approximately the cuff. Many chef coats will have a fairly large sized pocket that is found on the left side of the coat.

Depending upon the dining establishment the chef coat can be found in other colors. In order to be chef in a distinctive uniform the chef coats are designed in different colors as dark blue coats, light blue coats, black chef coats and even olive green chef coats which is customary of the establishment. Sometimes for a distinctive design and to give it a unusual look the coats have beautiful embroidery designed on the collar and front opening.

The jacket is double breasted that can be reversed and worn from both the sides to hide stains. The stuff for the coat is thick cotton cloth that protects from the heat of stove and oven and protects from splattering of boiling liquids. Knotted cloth buttons were used to survive frequent washing and contact with hot items. The pattern frequent on trousers is black and white checked pattern that conceal minor stains. The color white is projected so as to signify cleanliness and is generally worn by highly visible head chefs. Aprons worn above protect the wearer's garments from food splatters and stains.

The toque is a chef's hat that dates back to the 16th century. Different heights may indicate rank within a kitchen. The 100 folds of the toque are said to represent the many different ways a chef knows to cook an egg. In more conventional restaurants, especially traditional French restaurants, the white chef's coat is standard and considered part of a traditional uniform and as a practical chef's garment. white coats are worn by most serious chefs to signify the value and high regard of their profession. Senior kitchen staff usually wear and identified by their black trousers. Pants should have a straight leg, be hemmed to the top of the shoe and made from cotton. Sturdy, comfortable, anti-slip chef shoes are a chef uniform essential. Shoes must be fully enclosed and skid-resistant, because kitchen spills are common. For the same reason, fabric or open-toed shoes are never permitted in the kitchen. Fine dining establishments may require their chefs to wear a neckerchief The chef neckerchief absorbs sweat from your neck. Although not required by most kitchens, it still adds a finished "professional" look to any chef uniform. These trappings of uniform also serve up as a pointer between the bounds of salaried, and casual or part-time staff.

Women Chef Coats

Now women have also joined the professional culinary field as chefs than ever. Both men and women in the culinary industry want to present themselves in a professional manner. Specially tailored women's chef coats are absolutely necessary for female chefs who understand the importance of looking their best in the workplace environment and wish to openly display their professionalism. Women's Chef Coats & Women's Chef Jackets by Chef Uniforms are different in style but do not look like as if they are wearing a man's coat. Women's Chef Coats & Women's Chef Jackets are designed to have the perfect fit in a hot kitchen environment for the ladies. They have a more tapered style for the female figure, offering you more hip and arm room. Crafted from either 100% Cotton or Poly/Cotton, they will keep you cool and comfortable in the restaurant. A good quality women's chef coat that's tailored to your body shape and figure will set you apart from others in the kitchen—and enhance your professional image. When you display self-confidence in combination with a professional appearance and outstanding job performance, you earn respect. A women chef coat is tailored for a comfortable and streamlined fit. The design includes darts or pleats in the back that bring in the waist—reducing the amount of fabric and eliminating a “bulky” look. The shoulders should be narrower in the garment, to prevent the sleeves from drooping.

The women's chef coat is designed to compliment a woman's proportions and professional image. When a woman wears a chef coat cut and sized for a man, her ensemble may look sloppy, loose, or unflattering due to the poor fit of the garments. Female chefs—there are women's chef coats available in many styles, sizes, and colors to suit even the most discerning of tastes.

The traditional chef's uniform may be the standard for their profession. The non-traditional chefs uniforms have now a days have new looks and more styles as per the comfort and presentation suited as per the establishments.

SOLAR PANEL CLEANING

Solar power is revolutionizing the way the world produces electricity, but clean energy does not mean immunity to dirt. The significance for the maximum efficiency of a solar panel is maximizing the amount of light hitting the panel which is of utmost importance and solar panel cleaning does exactly this.

Solar panel conversion efficiency, typically in the 20 percent range, is reduced by dust, grime, pollen, and other particulates that accumulate on the solar panel. "A dirty solar panel can reduce its power capabilities by up to 30 percent in high dust/pollen or desert areas", says Seamus Curran, associate professor of physics at the University of Houston and director of the Institute for Nano Energy, which specializes in the design, engineering, and assembly of nanostructures.

Numerous studies have shown that panel soiling is the single most destructive force to solar panels and their production. Typical methods of cleaning have not been adequate, as getting on roof tops threatens the structural integrity of your roof, and water alone will cause mineral buildup that is even more harmful than the dust, dirt, smoke, and animal excrement that causes hot spots, which further increases the degradation of the cells in your system.

Paying to have solar panels cleaned is often an investment ; researchers found panels that hadn't been cleaned, or rained on, for 145 days during a summer drought , lost 7.4 percent of their efficiency. For larger commercial rooftop systems, the financial losses are bigger.

Solar panels efficiency levels produce the maximum amount of electricity and help the owner to make more money for when they are clean. Conversely, for the reason that solar panels are out in the open are exposed to the elements, they get dirty and have need of cleaning. You may think that rain washes off dust and pollutants, but in reality, rain water does not clean solar panels because the rain contains airborne dust particles that settle and attach to the surface after the rainwater evaporates. Various studies completed by universities in the U.S. have shown that if solar panels aren't kept clean, output can drop by up to 50% in the longer run.

How are solar panels cleaned?

The most of solar panel cleaning methods are sprinklers, electric charge systems and various coatings to make the panels self-cleaning. At the moment, these systems are in prototype or early production and are not fit for mass cleaning. We provide you with professional experts in solar panel cleaning and the best method to increase the output of the panel post cleaning.

For now, the most efficient, commonly used and cheapest way to clean solar panels is by using ultra-pure water which is fed to a brush head. This wets the panel, agitates and lifts the dirt, then rinses. Tap water is not suitable for cleaning solar panels because it contains mineral deposits which dry, create shade and inhibit output. Ultra-pure water has no impurities and as a result, the residue water that is left on the panels dries clear, with no streaks or spots. For now it is the best tried and tested method that has been used in countries further along their solar journey, such as the U.S. and UK for many years.
